Re: John J. Nazarian
Sent via Email and U.S. Mail

Gentlemen:

This letter will serve as a formal request to cease and desist any and all derogatory internet postings concerning my client John J. Nazarian. Additionally this letter will serve as a request to remove any and all fallacious references posted either by you individually or pursuant to your veiled internet entity entitled "a voice for men".

As you well know, Mr. Nazarian produced a video expose meant solely for entertainment purposes in connection with a project he was involved in. The video was not to be taken either seriously or literally. Your conversion and subsequent use of the video coupled with your misrepresentations to viewers that this video was actually designed to assist women in falsifying reports of domestic violence is clearly misleading and outrageous.

As such, I am advising you both that should the material not be removed from your internet site within 48 hours, my client is prepared to proceed with a request for a Temporary Restraining Order followed by a request for Permanent Injunction in the United States District Court for the Central District of California premised upon Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 65.

My client is further prepared to proceed with a lawsuit for damages against you both. It is my belief that your conduct is both malicious and misleading thereby having caused immediate and irreparable injury, loss and damage to Mr. Nazarian. Your continued postings and requests that other individuals "mirror" the video and post derogatory comments relating thereto is also actionable conduct both for purposes of my filing for injunctive relief and for monetary damages.

I further believe that your continued postings cause a disservice to the target audience you claim to embrace and/or assist. My client represents both husband and wives in divorce actions in his capacity as an investigator and has done so for years. He performs his work for each as a professional without regard to gender. He is non-biased and objective rather than the subjective and single sided individual you have painted in your postings. When performing services for family law attorneys who retain him for "real world" issues, he consistently does admirable work whether for the husband or the wife. Rather than alienate and disparage my client, you should reach out to him in an effort to obtain his advice such that your website could actually educate and service the thousands of husbands and fathers brought into the family law courts each year. I have no doubt that Mr. Nazarian's years of experience would actually benefit those individuals and would no doubt add credibility to your website.

The choice is clearly yours. I would suggest you think it over carefully and contact me within the next 48 hours advising me of your decision re: removal of the derogatory postings such that I can proceed accordingly.

Very truly yours,

LARRY M. BAKMAN
